IPO for early-stage life science companies – pros and cons and how to do it

SPEAKER:

Morten Albrechtsen
CEO FluoGuide

FluoGuide

Early-stage life science companies are often struggling for cash. A common misconception is that small life science start-ups cannot be listed on the stock market, but this is not necessarily so.

In spring 2019, the small Medicon Valley-based early-stage life science company FluoGuide completed an IPO. FluoGuide raised €2M on the Spotlight Stock Market in Sweden. Hear about the pros et cons and how to do an IPO and expand your life science network.
