

Does your patent make your investors happy – or does it protect your future business? Why not do both?

Join us for an engaging and insightful seminar at Symbion Frederiksberg, where patent experts will tackle this question.

Approaches to patent strategies depend highly on where your company is in the business cycle and who your competitors are. Many startups need to file so-called checkmark patents in order to show some seriousness, robustness and validity thereby increasing the chances of early funding.

However, in order to keep the costs low or because such checkmark patents are filed too early in the development process, the resulting protection often turns out to be very narrow and sometimes even counterproductive to the future business development.

The seminar will include a workshop on what a checkmark patent may be, the potential risks and benefits of a checkmark patent, what it can do to your business, and how you may both make your investors happy and utilize the patent system to a larger extent to also protect your business. Furthermore, many great inventions are not patented simply because it was assumed early on that the invention couldn't be patented – but this assumption often turns out to be false.

Join us for an engaging and insightful seminar at Symbion Frederiksberg, where patent experts will explore the topic together with the participants. Don't miss the chance to network with like-minded professionals and share experiences.
